

THE LANGUAGE OF OUR WORK

Presenters:

Theresa Buick and Eliciana Caro

Theresa Buick has been a Region Lead in Region 1 for the Regional Centers for Workforce Transformation since 2018. She also serves as the Associate Director of Workforce and Talent Development at Heritage Christian Services in Rochester, NY

Eliciana Caro is a RCWT Region 4 Lead. She is a BIPOC, teacher, advocate, nature lover, wellness coach, natural healing practitioner, consultant and mother. Currently, I work at HeartShare Human Services of New York in Brooklyn as a Training Coordinator and Curriculum developer

Join the Regional Centers for Workforce Transformation for this free workshop. This session will help to remind attendees of the language of our work. Language has the ability to build relationships and forge connections, but it's equally liable for creating barriers and impacting someone's sense of belonging. By using inclusive language and having conversations about the words we use, people are more likely to feel like they belong and can be their authentic selves whether at work, at home or out in their world. As we evolve and transform our work as DSPs from caregiving to supporting people, we need to be sure our language is in line with our actions. Learn how to use inclusive language to better promote it in your work and our world!
